NEW YORK German Chancellor Angela Merkel topped the Forbes list of the world's most powerful women, which is dominated by politicians, businesswomen and leaders in media and entertainment.

Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who came close to defeating President Obama when he sought the Democratic nomination in 2008, was second, followed by Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff.

"Our list reflects the diverse and dynamic paths to power for women today, whether leading a nation or setting the agenda on critical issues of our time," Moira Forbes, president & publisher of ForbesWoman, said in a statement.

Eight heads of state and 29 CEOs made Forbes' roster of the 100 most powerful women released Wednesday. They have an average age of 54 and collectively control $30 trillion. Twenty-two are single.

Turn your cube into a dance club

Work sucks sometimes, you know? You sit there, you do your job, you go home. But it doesn't always have to be unbearable. Lots of people listen to music on headphones to get through the day, but it seems that more offices are becoming cool with employees playing music for everyone to hear.

If office DJ duties fall into your lap—or if, like me, you just take them and hope the boss is cool with it—here's my advice to keep your colleagues' heads bobbin'.

Rule No. 1: Ask yourself, what would the VP say?

If you're an entry-level-er, maintain a sense of awareness about what you're playing. It's cool to be all Wolf Gang everything when it's you and your buds, but be cognizant of the fact that you're still ... you know, at work. Easy on the excessive profanity and explicit content.

Rule No. 2: Don't be scared to play the classics.

When playing tunes, think about every wedding you've been to. No, I'm not advising you to get drunk and hit on your co-worker's college roommate. Most playlists at weddings are chock-full of songs that everyone digs. Find that sweet spot between Stevie Wonder and "Shout" and you're golden.

Rule No. 3: You aren't an actual DJ, so calm down. True story: At an old job, a guy listened to bad R&B with his laptop speakers on full blast and inserted his own DJ commentary. Think a guy yelling "HERE WE GO! Y'ALL KNOW THIS ONE!" while working on a spreadsheet. He not only embarrassed himself, but his entire family. Don't be that guy.

Now that you know the rules, let's talk tools. It's easier than ever to put together a pretty impressive set while you sit. Here are a few programs/apps I like to use.

8tracks.com is my go-to for making office mixes. It's super easy, and the interface makes for quick playlist creation, embedding and sharing. Also, sometimes random people from Finland comment. Who doesn't appreciate a kind word from a Finn?

Mixcrate.com is a curated list of mixes from DJs all over this great land. I once found a mix of new wave/90s rap mashups. I got so excited I broke Rule No. 3. I also did the tootsie roll.

Spotify.com is the new kid on the block. This streaming music service recently arrived stateside after booming overseas. Using a collection of songs, you can make playlists that users can "subscribe" to like an RSS feed. It's not my favorite because it sometimes cuts out in the middle of a song, which gets me yelled at when I get into my patented Beach Boys/Trick Daddy/Silverchair triple play.

But enough talk. Let me show you how it's done. Over on my blog (redeyechicago.com/remix), I've created a few playlists on my blog that I think you'll dig. Play them in your office and tell me what happens. Now go forth and kick out the jams, office workers.

CHICAGO'S DWYANE EVENT

Cover your ears, Chicago—Wade's back for a party, and he'll sing bad karaoke if he wants to

By Luis Gomez | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Dwyane Wade can't carry a tune. He knows it and everyone who saw him belt out Boyz II Men's "End of the Road" in a 2009 YouTube video knows it as well. But the Miami Heat star and Robbins native hasn't let that stop him from making karaoke an annual tradition at his Wade's World Weekend, which benefits his youth-focused Wade's World Foundation.

"I can't sing, but now it's a thing people look forward to," Wade said. "I sang again last year. It was worse the first year."

Wade may break out the karaoke at his Bowling Classic at 10Pin Bowling Lounge on Thursday, but he's off the hook the rest of the weekend. "American Boy" singer Estelle will handle singing duties when she takes the stage at the Wade's World Weekend kickoff party at Enclave later that night.

On Saturday, Wade will be a judge at his Chicago Has Talent competition, hosted by "106 & Park's" Rocsi and comedian Lil Rel. The talent show will feature local students ages 7-18 competing for a $3,000 prize and performances by singer Jawan Harris and rapper Diggy Simmons.

"I think that's the best part of the weekend," Wade said of the talent show. "It's phenomenal. It's what the weekend is all about—giving kids a platform. Our motto is 'Every child deserves a shot.' Maybe one day a star will come from Chicago Has Talent."

The weekend will also include a $350-per-person benefit dinner at Trump Tower and VIP party at 8fifty8 in the West Loop on Friday. R&B star Erykah Badu (aka DJ Lo Down Loretta Brown) will DJ at the grand finale party at Tantrik in River West on Saturday.

As usual, the event is expected to attract celebrities and athletes. Past attendees have included Lupe Fiasco, Common, Tyrese Gibson, Lauren London, Jamie Hector (who played the memorable Marlo Stanfield on "The Wire"), the New Orleans Hornets' Chris Paul and the Dallas Mavericks' Shawn Marion.

Is Marion invited this year, even though his Mavs defeated Wade's Heat in the NBA finals in June?

"He's invited," Wade said. "He's a good friend. He's actually a neighbor of mine. Even though he won the championship, that doesn't take away from our friendship."

MR. EVERYWHERE

Dwyane Wade might not have his own reality show like Shaquille O'Neal. Or cut rap albums like Ron Artest, er, Metta World Peace. But chances are you've run across Wade even if you're not a hoops junkie. CHRIS SOSA, REDEYE

He takes on legends

In the mid-2000s, Wade and Charles Barkley went at it in a series of T-Mobile commercials (above). "Now that was impressive ... the way you squeezed into those tight little shorts [in the '80s]." Zing!

He's worth fighting over

On an episode of USA's "Burn Notice," which is set and filmed in Miami, disavowed spy Michael Westen starts a fight in a bar over who's better: Wade or Kobe Bryant. Westen was only pretending to hate on the Heat star so he could make an escape. Funny, Wade's teammate LeBron James is good at disappearing, too.

He's inspiring

Jay-Z (left) drops a reference to D-Wade (right) in his ode to the Big Apple, "Empire State of Mind": "If Jeezy's paying LeBron/I'm paying Dwyane Wade." The reference reportedly is to the price of cocaine. Um, we're not touching that one, Hova.

He's a sharp-dressed man

Wade was named to Esquire's Best Dressed Men in the World list in 2006 and 2007. Yep, all those snazzy suits beat that backpack Kevin Durant prefers any day. We wish we had Wade's tailor—though he might be out of our price range.

He's got acting chops

It wasn't exactly a stretch, but Wade played himself in the 2010 romantic comedy "Just Wright," which starred Chicago native Common and Queen Latifah. Just stay away from anything with "Kazaam" in the title, Dwyane.

15 minutes with WADE

By Kyra Kyles | REDEYE

If you're hoping Dwyane Wade will ditch the Miami vice and come home to the Chi, you're in for sad news. Wade—who grew up here, went to school at Marquette University in Milwaukee and joined the Miami Heat in 2003—is feeling quite at home in the land of sun, sand and white fedoras, according to a recent one-on-one interview.

But he did have some positive words for the Windy City, as well as candid views on everything from the newly opened Michael Jordan's Steak House Chicago to the VH1 reality show "Basketball Wives."

Check out the results of RedEye's 15 minutes with Dwyane Wade. Clock starts now.

On missing Chicago ...

[Pauses, laughs.] At times I do. I don't miss the winters, I'll tell you that. The city, I do love the city. Chicago is one of those cities, first of all, where there are good people. It's a good, clean city.

Best waterfront: Miami or Chicago?

[More laughter.] Miami. And maybe just because of everything combined. You've got the beach and the people. Chicago is very nice, but people don't fly in to go to the waterfront in Chicago. Hey, I ain't going to say Chicago just because I'm from here ... I tell you the truth.

On whether his celeb girlfriend, Gabrielle Union, prefers to hang with him in Chicago or Miami ...

On opening another restaurant [Wade's previous venture D Wade's Sports Grill fizzled last year after former partners filed a lawsuit and obtained an undisclosed settlement for breach of contract] ...

Obviously I've been in that area before, and it was not successful. But I would be interested in doing it again. Would it be my name if I opened another restaurant? No. I'm not going to put my name on it. I would like to be a part of something where you can go and it could feed the whole family. Not just a steakhouse. Not just seafood. Something everyone can get into, but not with my name on it. [Laughs.]

On the VH1 reality show "Basketball Wives" ...

I can count on one hand the number of times I have seen "Basketball Wives." It's not something I ever planned, believe me. It's not like, "Let me get something to drink and sit here and watch this show." It was just on. Obviously, personally I'm not a fan.

Any interest in his own reality show?

It depends on what the message of the show is. If it's following me around to talk about my life, I'm not pumped about that. It would have to be the right message and about something meaningful and that can help or encourage someone. But showing my lifestyle? I'm trying to get more private. I'm definitely not trying to be more known. I've got enough trouble.

Any advice for fellow maligned athlete Jay Cutler?

Well, obviously Jay, like [Wade and the Miami Heat] can't feed into things that people say. It's never as good as it sounds or as bad as it sounds. Understand you have a job to do and you're doing what you love to do. Don't let people get into your head. They may love you or hate you, but at end of day, just be yourself.

State's attorney: Girls were branded, sold to pimps

Chicago Tribune

Dozens of girls, some as young as 12, were pulled into a human trafficking ring that forced them into prostitution, Cook County State's Attorney Anita Alvarez said Wednesday.

The girls and women, some of them homeless, were recruited on CTA trains, the Internet or during random meetings on the street, Alvarez said while announcing that nine people were charged under a state anti-human trafficking law passed last year.

During a yearlong investigation dubbed "Little Girl Lost," investigators armed with wiretaps listened as girls were beaten and, sometimes, thrown into a car trunk and driven around as a form of punishment, Alvarez said. Others were branded.

One 13-year-old was sold from one pimp to another for $100.

Michael Anton, a commander with the Cook County sheriff's vice unit, called the case among the worst he's seen.

"There's so much of this out there," Anton said of human trafficking. "It's happening every day. It's happening in Chicago, Cook County, it's happening across the state."

Those arrested were charged with "involuntary sexual servitude of a minor" and trafficking in persons for forced labor. Four of them appeared in Cook County court Wednesday and were ordered held on bail as high as $1 million.

The other five are scheduled to appear Thursday. Alvarez said the investigation is ongoing.

2 teens charged in shooting of 1-year-old girl

Two teenagers were charged Wednesday with shooting a 1-year-old girl in the head Tuesday morning while aiming at a man riding a bike in South Chicago, authorities said.

Gary Moore and Fredrick Dean, both 16, were charged Wednesday with two counts of attempted murder and one count of aggravated battery with a firearm, according to Cook County state's attorney's office spokeswoman Tandra Simonton.

The little girl was taken to Children's Memorial Hospital after Tuesday's shooting, where she underwent surgery. She remained at the hospital Wednesday night, according to her family. Earlier she had still been in critical condition. TRIBUNE

Homicide tracker

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Austin saw two homicides in two days this week, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

On Monday, a 54-year-old man was shot to death in the 500 block of North Leamington Avenue, police said. A day earlier, a 14-year-old boy was fatally shot in the 500 block of North Long Avenue, according to officials.

Austin has recorded 15 homicides so far this year, RedEye data shows. The West Side community area saw 23 homicides last year.

Citywide, fatal gunshot homicides were recorded in the last week in Chicago Lawn, Greater Grand Crossing, New City and South Lawndale, according to officials.

Twenty-six homicides have been recorded so far this month. Police recorded 60 homicides in August 2010, RedEye found. TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM

Chicago bicycling group launches transit campaign

By Tracy Swartz

REDEYE

The Active Transportation Alliance, a long-time Chicago-area bicycling advocacy group, launched a transit campaign Wednesday to fight for better service.

Riders for Better Transit is pushing for an overhaul of the CTA Red Line, a universal fare card system, a revamp of Union Station and a bus rapid transit system for express bus service.

"Transit riders really need a voice," alliance executive director Ron Burke said. "We need transit riders to be viewed as a constituency."

Some of the items on the alliance's agenda also are on the CTA's agenda.

Mayor Emanuel has said that modernizing the Red Line is a top priority, and the CTA has presented plans to pilot bus rapid transit on Jeffery Boulevard on the South Side.

"The fact that someone is doing a pilot study doesn't mean these things are going to get done," Burke said. "There is a lot of heavy lifting yet to be done."

The group is similar to a transit group in New York, the Straphangers Campaign, which advocates for lower fares and station improvements.

Chicago's alliance said riders can voice their support for the campaign on its website, activetrans.org.

Police: Blue Line bomb threat unfounded

Chicago Tribune

Blue Line service was disrupted for more than two hours Wednesday afternoon due to police investigation of a bomb threat at the Jackson Street station, officials said.

Police said there was a bomb threat called in at 12:51 p.m. concerning that station, and the bomb and arson unit had the trains bypass the station during the investigation. No bomb was found and police said the threat was unfounded.

At 1:15 p.m., the Blue Line subway service still was running, but trains were bypassing the Jackson Street station at the request of police, spokeswoman Catherine Hosinski said.

By about 3:20 p.m. police gave the CTA the OK to resume stopping at the station, Hosinski said.

Hurricane Irene, shown Wednesday in the Caribbean Sea, now is a Category 3 storm with winds of 120 mph. Irene is projected to possibly clip the Outer Banks of North Carolina before moving up the Eastern Seaboard. NOAA PHOTO

Hurricane heads for East Coast

MIAMI Hurricane Irene intensified into a Category 3 storm Wednesday as it battered the Bahamas and threatened to lash much of the East Coast in coming days.

Irene could reach Category 4 strength by Thursday, the National Hurricane Center said.

The storm had maximum sustained winds of 120 mph as of 2 p.m. ET Wednesday, and is expected to strengthen "in the next day or so," the National Hurricane Center said.

"This is a huge storm," CNN meteorologist Jacqui Jeras said. "The cloud field is more than 800 miles across. The tropical storm-force winds extend out 200 miles from the center."

The storm could threaten large sections of the Eastern Seaboard, from the Carolinas into the Northeast.

The strengthening, which officially made Irene a major hurricane, came as the storm continued to pound the southeastern Bahamas and the Turks and Caicos Islands.

The storm will curve northward as it nears the U.S., with most of the latest projections suggest the storm will avoid landfall until it is north of North Carolina. Some computer models suggest New York or New Jersey could be hit.

"Everywhere from North Carolina to Massachusetts remains in the cone of uncertainty," Jeras said. "Worst-case scenario, we could be looking at two landfalls, or we could be lucky and get a brush instead of a direct hit."

Fighting in Libya ongoing

With reported pockets of fighting remaining in Tripoli on Wednesday, the whereabouts of Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi still were not known. A senior NATO official warned that the war "is not over yet, although it's close."

Jobs resigns as Apple CEO

Silicon Valley legend Steve Jobs on Wednesday resigned as chief executive of Apple Inc. in a stunning move that ended his 14-year reign. The 55-year-old pancreatic cancer survivor has been on medical leave since January. Jobs will stay on as Apple's chairman.

Cracks in D.C. monument

The Washington Monument remained closed Wednesday as engineers studied ways to repair cracks at the top of the capital's iconic structure—one day after a rare 5.8-magnitude East Coast earthquake.

Russian rocket crashes

A Russian space freighter carrying cargo to the International Space Station crashed in a remote area of Siberia, Russian emergency officials said Wednesday. The unmanned Progress cargo craft was due to dock with the station Friday.

Not-so-great catches

Bears haven't exactly had good luck at the wide receiver position

RedEye

As fans commence wringing their hands yet again about the Bears' wide receiver situation, we at RedEye couldn't help but think that it's a common complaint throughout the years.

From the likes of Bobby Engram to Bernard Berrian to Muhsin Muhammad, the Bears' go-to guy at the position hasn't exactly been a Hall of Famer in the making.

This season, while not in his prime, Roy Williams was supposed to ease the worries of Bears nation. It's only two games into the preseason, but it doesn't seem to be working out quite like it was supposed to.

But like Muhammad famously said once, Chicago "is where receivers go to die." That may be overstating it, but check out some of these stats for Bears leading receivers over the years.

2010

Johnny Knox: 960 yards, 5 touchdowns

2007

Bernard Berrian: 951 yards, 5 touchdowns

2003

Marty Booker: 715 yards, 4 touchdowns

2000

Marcus Robinson: 738 yards, 5 touchdowns

1997

Ricky Proehl: 753 yards, 7 touchdowns

1992

Tom Waddle: 674 yards, 4 touchdowns

Roy Williams
US PRESSWIRE

Knox back to No. 1?

Johnny Knox hasn't been totally eliminated from the starting lineup just yet.

As Bears receivers coach Darryl Drake preached throughout training camp, Knox can compete for his starting job as the "X" receiver. Newcomer Roy Williams won't be handed the job for the regular season just yet.

"The good thing about what's happening right now is it has forced Johnny Knox to get better," Drake said. "I'm proud of Johnny Knox. It's forced Johnny to be a better student of the game."

"What Roy has to understand is Johnny Knox will be in there if things don't get better in a hurry."

TRIBUNE

The wizards of blahs

White Sox and Cubs and Bears, oh my.

Hey, we'll take the last first. They stink. That offensive line—I see nothing at this point. Normally we could live with that except the receivers blow, too. I see Roy Williams is in midseason form with the drops, and everyone else looks typically average.

You know things are a little off kilter when the special teams look terrible. Usually we can count on these guys to keep it close, but now I'm wondering. And the defense without Lance Briggs ... turn off the game and don't tell me the score.

I reach a point where I turn preseason ball off, but you would think the Bears would have things a bit more put together by now. As for playing the Giants, always remember this: Whatever the Bears have tried to be as a football team throughout the years, the Giants have actually been. Yes, they're much better at it. Enough.

Changes in Wrigleyville. Jim Hendry out. His biggest mistake: not hiring Joe Girardi. No, wait ... Carlos Zambrano ... Alfonso ... Kerry ... Sammy ... too many to count. But here's a hint: You try to make stars and leaders out of guys who don't want the job.

Starlin "Stars in his eyes" Castro: Could be great, but the guy zones out on national TV and no one is schooling the guy. That's why you're losers.

You're also losers because a guy like Crane Kenney is the president of the team, has no baseball background and contributes nothing. You're losers because it comes out that Moises Alou and Aramis Ramirez booked flights home even before Game 7 of the NLCS in 2003. Oh, blame the curses, Steve Bartman, the goat. It's so cute and fun to talk about at parties with old people, but the truth becomes hard to miss.

I hear a fix: Rick Hahn, White Sox assistant GM. OK, don't take this guy from the team I care about. Instead, how about the Cubs get Kenny Williams and the Sox make Hahn the No. 1 guy? Because, really, Williams needs to hit the bricks too. This way the Cubs continue to make mistakes (the way the fans love it) and the Sox get better.

Everyone wins.

Another Carlos leaving?

Yankees reportedly claim Cubs' Pena off waivers

The waiver wire began heating up Wednesday afternoon when the N.Y. Yankees claimed Cubs first baseman Carlos Pena off trade waivers, according to ESPN The Magazine.

The fates of other players who've been waived in the past few days, particularly Minnesota's Jim Thome, remain up in the air. Some reports have Thome already claimed, but no team has been named, though rumors have linked him to the White Sox.

The Yankees have 48 hours to agree to a trade with the Cubs. If no agreement can be reached, Pena can be pulled off waivers and remain property of the Cubs. It would be a similar case with other players who are currently on the waiver list, including Thome.

While the Yankees could use help particularly at designated hitter, general manager Brian Cashman said Wednesday that it's unlikely the team will make a trade.

"I said (recently that) I think it would be very unlikely we made a trade," said Cashman, who acquired pitchers Raul Valdes and Aaron Laffey off waivers earlier in the month. "I'm going to continue to scan everything but no, I'm not optimistic of doing anything. I think this is most likely what we've got."

Pena is making $10 million on a one-year contract that expires at the end of this season. He has been inconsistent throughout the season. He's batting just .223 but has 23 home runs and 67 RBIs.

WEDNESDAY'S GAMES

- » Cubs 3, Atlanta 2
- » White Sox at L.A. Angels, late

» Brian Scalabrine is headed to Italy. The free-agent forward, who spent last season with the Bulls, will attend Benetton Treviso's training camp without a contract before making a decision on his future. That's the same team for which Toni Kukoc once played.

» A small college in northern Indiana that decided to stop playing the national anthem at sporting events will play "America the Beautiful" instead. Goshen College's president says "America the Beautiful" is more fitting with the Mennonite Church-affiliated school's pacifist traditions while also honoring the country.

'Hood's latest upscale sports bar already has its game face on

By Emily Van Zandt

The concept of an upscale sports bar is nothing new—add some fancy cheese on your burgers, keep the beer list long and full of craft, and throw some flat-screens on the wall. So what makes The Scout Waterhouse & Kitchen stand out? Location, location, location. It's a formula that hasn't made big strides in the South Loop (Jimmy Green's comes close), so when we heard that The Scout would be taking over the former Opera space, we stopped by on a game day to check it out.

Get there early ...

if you're planning on posting up at the bar up front. The night we stopped in, I pegged the crowd to the Bears game that was in progress, but from what I heard from staff and a friend who had dropped by before, the bar is almost always packed. Not bad for being open only a few weeks. The crowd seemed young but not sloppy with a mix of guys meeting up for beers and the game, girls in heels and short skirts, and couples grabbing a quick bite.

The menu ...

has anything you'd crave on game day, plus a few extras. Dive into flatbread pizzas ($6-$7) or a huge burger and fries ($8-$11) or opt for a shared meal with small plates like pulled-pork sliders ($8), chicken nachos ($7) and beer mussels ($8).

Pulled chicken nachos

Group can't agree on one game? ...

This is your spot. TVs line the walls every few inches, which can be a bit dizzying when they're all tuned to the same channel. But on a Saturday or Sunday this fall, you'd better believe patrons aren't going to miss a minute of their favorite team. Try to score one of the oversized leather booths toward the back of the main room for optimal fantasy-team bonding. But the cocktail list ... leaves something to be desired. The solo gin fizz ($11) is an overly sweet mix of gin, blood orange nectar, soda and a heavy pour of maraschino liqueur. The Tortuga ($12) is a rather confusing mix of tequila, St. Germain, lime and grapefruit juices with a chili pepper garnish. Our table couldn't quite figure out why a drink named Tortuga wasn't rum-based and the cocktail would have benefited from a much stronger taste from the peppers. With a dozen cocktails at $10-$12, it's an impressive list for a sports bar, but the mixes are hit and miss.

Just wait until ...

football season gets into full swing. This place is going to be a hub for sports watchers in the neighborhood. With ridiculously easy access to the Roosevelt stop and the benefit of being one of the few upscale sports options in the neighborhood, The Scout should have no trouble pulling in a steady group of weekend regulars.

And if that grilled cheese looks familiar ...

you're right. Scout co-owner Chris Bravos was formerly involved with The Pony and created its signature 14-inch grilled-cheese sandwich, which now appears on The Scout menu in a slightly different form: Try the sharable sandwiches ($9) in a triple cheese or "CheeseBrook" version (which incorporates Canadian bacon) with a tomato basil sauce for dipping.

Bottom line

The Scout Waterhouse & Kitchen has its formula down: sleek and comfortable decor, plenty of seating, hearty (and generally affordable) eats, and a drink menu that has something for everyone in your group. Add to that a fast-moving and personable staff and five TVs within your view at all times, and you've got one sports-watching spot that will stay hot this fall.

NIGHTCRAWLERS

SEEN ON THE SCENE AT ... BOTTOM LOUNGE, 1375 W. LAKE ST.

On Friday we popped into the Bottom Lounge, where we found a club full of people partying to the bass-heavy beats of hipster hip-hop sensation, Kreyayshawn. —CRAIG SEYMOUR

Stephen Carr
25, "freestyler"

What is the best thing to drink before freestyling?

Crown, dawg, Crown. We like to sip on the Crown Royal.

Who's your favorite freestyler?

I really like my boy, [Hollywood] Holt.

Have you ever used your rhyme skills to hook up?

The answer is yes.

So, spitting a rhyme is a good way to pick somebody up?

It can help you out. It can't hurt at all.

Lindsay Puetz 24, paralegal

What brings you out tonight?

Kreyayshawn! I love her. She's amazing. She's real. She's just honest.

What are you drinking?

I'm gonna be drinking Sparks. I'm from Milwaukee. That's how we do it, very cheap.

Who do you think is the most stylish hip-hop artist?

I think Kreyayshawn. She's funky, eclectic, colorful. She's not matching, but she doesn't have to.

Have you ever felt the need to bust a rhyme in everyday life?

Who hasn't? Life needs rhymes.

Karin Zink
19, student

What brings you out tonight?

My friend wanted me to come with her. We thought it would be fun.

How did you pick out your outfit?

I pick out my clothes the same way every day. It's based on how I'm feeling at the time. I try to match my mood to the clothes.

Who so you think is the most stylish music artist?

I gotta say Rihanna. She always has some edge to her, and I like it. I feel like she has attitude in the way she dresses.

How much will you pay for a drink?

Emily Van Zandt

evanzandt@tribune.com

Two years ago, I would never think of paying $12 for a cocktail. These days, I don't think twice.

Call it a hazard of the job, but my perception of fair pricing has completely shifted since the days of college town drinking or Kansas City bar-hopping. Three years ago, I thought $1 bottles were the norm. Two years ago I thought I was rebellious for doing $4 shots of Jameson. I would never have gone to a bar with a cover. And when I went to The Violet Hour during one of my first assignments in Chicago, I was floored by the numbers on the menu.

But then I went to The Aviary. When you spend more than one night in a bar where people are throwing down $20 a drink, it changes things. Suddenly a $12 cocktail sounds normal, a $9 drink is a steal and a $5 drink is something to distrust.

But is this a healthy alcohol worldview?

According to my checking account, no. I had a come-to-Jesus weekend earlier this summer while visiting some friends in Little Rock. Pitchers were ordered, and when it came time for me to pick up a round I nearly teared up at the total: $15. For two pitchers. Of beer.

When I returned to Chicago, I vowed to stay away from some of the pricier places. Cheap beer and mixed drinks are just fine for a regular weekend night out. But it wasn't long before I was sucked back into nights at The Drawing Room and Sable. There's something about a well-made cocktail that makes the $10-plus price worth it—at least for me.

I still have a hard time convincing friends—especially beer-swilling boys—that these spots are worth it for a special occasion. And fights have broken out among even my best friends as to whether a good neighborhood dive will always out-party the trendy new cocktail spot downtown.

Now I want to hear from you. Check out the Eat & Drink section of redeyechicago.com for this week's Bar-gument, where two of my fellow staffers face off on whether or not they'd pay more than $12 for a cocktail. Vote!

Estelle's not about to bare all, but she will dish on Kanye

By Kyra Kyles REDEYE

Get ready for a British invasion, Chicago. "Break My Heart" singer Estelle drops into Enclave on Thursday to kick off Dwyane Wade's Wade's World Weekend. RedEye chatted up the U.K. and U.S. chart-topper on an array of topics, including her work with rappers from Kanye West to Rick Ross and where she keeps the Grammy she shares with West for her breakout hit, "American Boy." She even told us what she would or would not be willing to do to amp up anticipation for her next album, "All Of Me," expected early next year. Feel free to read her responses with a wicked cool British accent.

Estelle

When: 9 p.m. Thursday Where: Enclave, 220 W. Chicago Ave. Tickets: $20-$120 at dwade3events.com. Event proceeds benefit the Wade's World youth charity.

What was it about your first U.S. single, "American Boy," that captivated the American public?

I think when you put your energy into a song, that's what comes out the other end. It was just the vibe and the energy and all of that. You automatically feel that when you hear it.

Chicagoans in particular seem to enjoy the amount of energy directed at our city during the individual lyrical shout-outs.

Oh, you know, Kanye was like, "Get my Chicago shout-out" for sure. It was fun.

What is Kanye like to work with?

It was real easy working with Kanye. We were all on the same wavelength. It was like, "Let's knock this out."

Where do you keep the Grammy you won for the song ... and tell the truth.

[Laughs.] I keep it on my bookshelf.

Do you keep it gleaming?

My friends come 'round and polish it. They say, "Girl, you need to take more care of it."

What was it like working with Rick Ross on "Don't Break My Heart"? Are you getting more calls to work with rappers after working with him and Kanye?

Yeah, I think I'm getting more calls. People still say, "Oh, do you sing with rappers?" I'm like, "Do you realize I had a song with Gucci [Mane], Kanye, and I'm doing something with Jadakiss coming up?" Some people don't know I used to be a rapper. I've worked with Busta [Rhymes] before and will again. I get a whole lot of love from hip-hop.

But did Rick Ross try to wrap you up in his swagged out lifestyle?

[Laughs.] Ha, he was a sweetheart. We weren't in the studio together when we did the song, but we did the video.

It was cool ... sitting in a limo, eating Taco Bell. And he was just so cool. Like family. Just nice.

How does your own rap past help you in dealing with the hip-hop community?

It totally helps. I get their vibe. In fact, I never thought I was going to be a singer. I thought I'd be a rap singer. ... With my last album, "Shine," I sang more because I was coming out of a personal period in my life where I was more into singing and I was listening to a different type of music. ... But now, I've got my swagger back, my energy back for rap. ... I'll always be both.

Lately, there's been focus on singers who have been posing nude. How do you feel about tapping into your sexuality to attract a wider fan base?

I love being sexy; I love that stuff. But I like my clothes too. I love keeping my knickers on ... that's my passion. [Laughs.] I've been offered to do a shoot and be half naked and be topless, and I've said nope.

Finally, I know this is a tough subject for you, but how do you feel learning that Amy Winehouse's toxicology reports [released Tuesday] showed she had no drugs in her system when she died?

It's good that she was on the right path, but then that begs the question: What the hell happened? ... I don't understand. ... I don't want one more bad thing to happen. I want some good news. KKYLES@TRIBUNE.COM | @THEKYLEFILES

These stars aren't afraid to show their silly sides at theme parks

By Ariel Alexovich
REDEYE

There are few things in this world—dental floss, In-N-Out Burger and the TSA come to mind—that equalize the wide gap between the luxe lives of celebrities and those of us regular people. Theme park rides, it seems, should be added to that list. Six Flags Great America just released some pics of Katy Perry screaming and laughing on several roller coasters, and she's not alone. Check out these other stars who aren't afraid to go bananas at theme parks. ARIEL@TRIBUNE.COM | @MISSARIEL; GETTY IMAGES PHOTOS

'TIK TOK'

Fishburne

Cusack

Who knew Tuesday nights are prime for celeb spotting? The Tribune's Luis Gomez reports Ke$ha received a deep tissue massage at the Dana Hotel & Spa that day. Laurence Fishburne dined solo at Le Colonial. John Cusack had dinner at Ra Sushi in the Gold Coast, and LeAnn Rimes and Eddie Cibrian ate veggie burgers at Lux Bar. So where was Vince Vaughn?

TUESDAY

He's on a show

Now this is a job that calls for a good anti-perspirant. Old Spice guy Isaiah Mustafa (left) has been cast in a recurring role on ABC's "Charlie's Angels," tvline.com reports. The muscle man will play Miami detective Ray Goodson. We're guessing he probably can score the Angels tickets to that thing they love.

No-host show

It's only an awards show—who needs a host? The MTV Video Music Awards will go sans MC on Sunday, billboard.com reports. Maybe the Academy Awards debacle with James Franco made the network skittish? On the plus side, the network also announced Wednesday that Beyonce has joined the list of performers.

Very happy couple

You want proof Will Smith and Jada Pinkett Smith (right) still are a happy couple? Fine, they'll give it to you. A day after denying rumors of a split through their publicist, the grinning power couple was spotted shopping in Malibu, Calif. Did we mention they were grinning?

THE DIGITS

25

That's the number of apes living in San Francisco, according to a count by Slate magazine. Which means, contrary to the dozens of primates that burst forth in "The Rise of the Planet of the Apes," there aren't actually enough of them to overthrow the city. Better luck next time.

With "Horrible Bosses" recently topping the $100 million mark in worldwide earnings, it becomes the eighth Jennifer Aniston movie in the past eight years to do so, deadline.com reports.
